

For the household consists of foreign residents

During the procedure of changing the address, if your household consists of foreign residents and request to register the relationship with the householder, we require the certificate and its Japanese translation.

Please note that if you don't prepare these documents, we register the relationship among your household to "housemate".

In case that you have already finished this procedure at your previous address, and it can be confirmed with the moving-out notification, submission of the certificate is not required.

Things you need for the procedure

① Documents to proof the relationship (the original documents are required)

Certificate of acceptance of marriage or birth report would be the documents to certify the relationship among your household when you report these notifications in Japan.

Cases other than the above, we require a marriage or birth certificate issued in your own country. Please ask the embassy or the consulate for details.

② Japanese translation

When the documents are written in a language besides Japanese, we also require the Japanese translation with the translator's name on it.

The translation should be covered the whole information of the original documents.
